A Message from Deputy Director of Operations, Katie S. Hagen

It is with great pleasure that I introduce the 2016-2021 Workforce Plan for the California Department of Human Resources (CalHR). This is the first such plan for CalHR, which was developed to closely align with the recently refreshed CalHR Strategic Plan. A workforce plan is a tool or guide used to help ensure the organization's talent needs can support the organization's business needs and goals.

During the strategic plan refresh process, staff at all levels of the organization reassessed CalHR's vision, mission, and values and determined that they still resonate and accurately reflect the organization's purpose. Similarly, staff throughout the organization contributed to CalHR's goals and objectives, and all divisions within the organization aligned their initiatives and projects with the overarching goals and objectives.

However, each of the goals outlined in CalHR's Strategic Plan require a talented, professional, and skilled workforce to achieve them. Although CalHR has already started to invest in developing its workforce to be more proficient in reengineering business processes and project management, we must continue our efforts. In order for the department to successfully fulfill CalHR's mission and vision, CalHR must work diligently to recruit and retain a highly skilled, diverse team of professionals dedicated to providing human resources services to those departments and employees that serve California.

In the following document, we outline the current state of the CalHR workforce, identify knowledge, skill gaps, and risks within the workforce, as well as discuss our plan for mitigating these concerns. CalHR is in a unique position in its role of providing human resource solutions to the broader state workforce, and this plan intends to leverage those solutions and collaborate with stakeholders to ensure the professional development of CalHR's workforce.

Thank you for your interest in CalHR's Workforce Plan. I hope you find this report informative and enlightening as we serve to demonstrate our commitment to our workforce.

Katie Hagen

Introduction

Forward

Workforce planning is an ongoing process that seeks to align the needs and priorities of the organization to the number of staff and respective knowledge, skills, and abilities required of its workforce. Workforce planning is an active process which informs the organization and stakeholders of current and future environmental impacts and incorporates initiatives and strategies necessary to ensure human capital and talent management efforts support the business goals.

Workforce planning is a challenging process as it forces us to think about how to strategically align the workforce to the organizational business needs. Workforce planning can include any workforce challenge an organization faces—from recruitment, selection, compensation and training—to knowledge transfer, succession planning, retention and more.

Within this report, we will discuss the challenges and opportunities faced by CalHR and provide a comprehensive analysis of our existing workforce. We will also identify several strategic initiatives that will be undertaken in the next five years to ensure CalHR can meet its mission, vision, goals, and objectives.

Strategic Direction

CalHR's Vision is:

To be the premier leader and trusted partner in innovative human resources management.

CalHR's Mission is:

To provide exceptional human resources leadership and services with integrity, respect and accountability to state departments and all current and prospective employees.

CalHR's Goals include:

- Providing superior customer service
- Further developing CalHR's team of experts
- Leveraging technology to enhance our services
- Striving for organizational excellence
- Ensuring fiscal responsibility

CalHR's Strategic Plan can be found on our website.

History

In 1981, Governor Jerry Brown's Reorganization Plan created the Department of Personnel Administration (DPA) to carry out the state's newly enacted collective bargaining responsibilities under the Ralph C. Dills Act. In 1984, another reorganization transferred responsibility for position classification to DPA from the State Personnel Board (SPB).

Prior to collective bargaining, SPB was the state's central personnel agency. Today, SPB retains responsibility for "merit-related" functions.

In 2011, as a result of the Governor's Reorganization Plan No. 1, DPA and many divisions of SPB "merged" to form the California Department of Human Resources (CalHR). The merger was effective July 2012. Most of the examination, training, and civil rights responsibilities previously performed by the SPB were transferred to CalHR. In addition, approximately 90 SPB staff members were reassigned to CalHR. Today, the SPB continues to oversee merit related functions, including adjudication of disciplinary actions and performing merit-related policy audits.

In January 2015, Governor Brown launched Civil Service Improvement (CSI) as a collaborative effort between the Government Operations Agency, CalHR, SPB, Department of Finance and the Governor's Office. CalHR is leading many of the CSI development and implementation initiatives and the department will be responsible for sustaining and maintaining these major changes that will shape the State of California workforce for many years to come. More information regarding these efforts can be found on the CSI website.

What We Do

CalHR represents the Governor as the "employer" in all matters concerning state human resources and collective bargaining. CalHR provides services for all issues related to salaries and benefits, job classifications, and training. Specifically, CalHR provides services through the following programs:

- Benefits
Administers dental, vision, the Employee Assistance Program, workers' compensation, and other benefits to state employees; and partners with the California Public Employees Retirement System (CalPERS) to administer health benefits.
- Civil Rights
Provides leadership and guidance to departments to protect the civil rights of all state employees.
- In-Home Supportive Services
Serves as the designated collective bargaining representative on behalf of the California In-Home Supportive Services Authority, which is the employer of record for collective bargaining purposes in seven demonstration counties pursuant to the In-Home Supportive Services Employer-Employee Relations Act.

- Labor Relations
Represents the Governor as the "employer" in issues involving employer-employee relations, including collective bargaining pursuant to the Ralph C. Dills Act.
- Legal
Provides legal advice and representation to the Governor's Office, CalHR executive programs, and various client agencies throughout the state on matters concerning collective bargaining, employment law, and personnel management.
- Personnel Management
Administers the state's classification plan, salaries and manager/supervisor programs, and other personnel related programs.
- Savings Plus
Administers the state employees' 401(k) and 457 voluntary supplemental retirement programs and the retirement programs for part-time, seasonal and temporary employees and the Alternate Retirement program for specified employees.
- Selection
Creates and administers civil service exams providing a fair and open process to hire the most qualified candidates to serve the state.
- Workforce Development Programs and Special Projects
Responsible for statewide recruitment, statewide workforce planning, and statewide training programs to ensure the recruitment and retention of a diverse and qualified workforce.

Overview

The goal of CalHR's workforce plan is to develop and implement 14 initiatives over the next five years that will aid CalHR in addressing several identified workforce gaps. These gaps, if not addressed, could threaten CalHR's ability to accomplish its core mission or workload as well as pose risk to achieving its Strategic Plan goals. The workforce gaps identified can be categorized into four areas: recruitment, retention, knowledge transfer, and succession planning. While all of the goals identified will help CalHR achieve its strategic goals, this workforce plan specifically supports the newly refreshed CalHR Strategic Plan's second goal most distinctly by "further developing CalHR's team of experts." All outlined initiatives support developing CalHR's staff through significant knowledge transfer and retention efforts, and ensuring we retain those staff through succession planning and other professional development efforts. Certainly, CalHR's goals of providing superior customer service, leveraging technology to enhance our services, striving for organizational excellence, and ensuring fiscal responsibility are also fortified by addressing these workforce gaps.

The goals outlined in this plan include:

- Develop and implement a diversity and inclusion program.
- Collect on-boarding and off-boarding recruitment and retention data.
- Develop and implement targeted recruitment strategies for hard-to-recruit positions.
- Develop and implement an employee recognition program.
- Conduct a career path review within and across divisions and develop a communication plan.
- Assess employees' training history and develop professional development training plans.
- Update and implement human resource policies and procedures.
- Explore and develop knowledge transfer strategies.
- Develop and implement on-boarding and new employee orientation program.
- Develop and implement a succession leadership plan.
- Explore, develop and implement a "stay interview" program or engagement or climate survey.
- Explore, develop, and implement a job rotation program.
- Identify key competencies by position and explore automated solutions to track competencies.
- Develop and implement a mentoring program.

Challenges and Trends

CalHR is not unique in its workforce challenges within California state government, with gaps identified in the area of recruitment, retention, knowledge transfer, and succession planning. With relatively recent leadership changes, and with the creation of CalHR in 2012, the department's infrastructure is still being strengthened while continuing its focus on its very important strategic goals. CalHR is leading workforce initiatives statewide, and therefore, it must ensure the investment in the workforce begins within the organization itself.

Methodology

CalHR's workforce planning approach included executive staff input representing all business areas within CalHR to help identify workforce challenges as well as developing goals to assist the programs in meeting their strategic plan objectives.

As the workforce plan is implemented within CalHR, the communication plan outlined in Appendix C: Accountability and Communications Plan will help facilitate workforce efforts in the coming years, and ensure all responsible parties are identified and appropriately trained for full implementation of the plan.

Workforce Overview

Current Workforce Profile

CalHR is a small department with less than 300 permanent staff. The organization is composed of three primary branches: Labor, Legal and Operations. Within those branches there are 16 business areas:

- Statutory Appeals Unit
- Legal Services Division
- Labor Relations Division
- In Home Health Support Services Division
- Office of Financial Management and Economic Research
- Psychological and Medical Screening Unit
- Legislative Affairs
- Communications
- Administrative Services Division
- Information Technology Division
- Benefits Division
- Personnel Management Division
- Savings Plus Program
- Selection Division
- Office of Civil Rights
- Workforce Development Programs Division

The CalHR organization chart can be found in Appendix F: Organization Chart.

While much of CalHR's workforce has traditionally come from within state service, some CalHR programs are unique in that the competencies are so specialized for certain positions, that the candidate pool is significantly limited within state service. An example would be in the Labor Division where experience negotiating with unions is a critical competency, but few candidates possess this skill or experience. In addition, because the programs require a high level of expertise in specialized areas of human resource administration, those employees with specific program expertise find it difficult to identify other career path opportunities within and outside CalHR. These are challenging workforce gaps for CalHR and are outlined in workforce gaps and risks sections of this report.

Demographic Overview

Ethnicity and Gender

CalHR's workforce is comprised of 65 percent women and 35 percent men. While some divisions within CalHR vary significantly from these averages, it is not unusual in public or private sector customer service oriented business areas to have much higher percentages of female employees. However, in areas like financial management and information technology, the number of male employees is much higher as these fields generally attract a higher percentage of males.

CalHR's overall ethnic composition is 54 percent Caucasian, 19 percent Hispanic, 13 percent Asian, and 8 percent African American. Pacific Islander, Native American, and "Other" make up 6 percent of the workforce. Listed below is a comparison of CalHR's ethnicity and gender statistics compared to civil service statewide data.

Table 1. CalHR and Statewide Gender and Ethnicity Demographics.

Demographic	CalHR	Statewide
Women	65%	46%
Men	35%	54%
Caucasian	54%	46%
Hispanic	19%	23%
Asian	13%	17%
African American	8%	10%
Other	6%	4%

While a significant portion of the CalHR workforce is Caucasian, certain business areas are more diverse than others, and certain categories of employees are more diverse than others. For example; the ethnic diversity of CalHR's management team (see Table 2. CalHR Management and Custom Relevant Labor Force (RLF) Gender and Ethnicity Demographics) is fairly representative of the relevant labor force. "Relevant labor force" is defined as the pool of individuals who possess the requisite qualifications for the job within the geographic areas in which the agency can reasonably be expected to recruit.

Table 2. CalHR Management and Custom Relevant Labor Force (RLF) Gender and Ethnicity Demographics.

Demographic	CalHR Management	Custom RLF
Women	57%	48%
Men	43%	52%
Caucasian	63%	68%
Hispanic	18%	6%
Asian	9%	11%
African American	5%	5%
Native American	0%	1%
Other	0%	8%

CalHR recognizes it should serve as a leader in championing the importance of a diverse and inclusive workforce; as such, it has identified the development of a diversity and inclusion program for CalHR employees as one of its key workforce initiatives.

Disabled Employee Representation

CalHR's representation for people with disabilities is 22 percent department-wide, whereas representation among CalHR's management team is 25 percent. The statewide workforce representation for people with disabilities is 11 percent. Although CalHR's representation is above statewide representation, we continue to seek ways to focus on disability awareness.

CalHR is proud to host an active Disability Advisory Committee (DAC) and we anticipate at least four events in the coming year: a supervisory training focused on reasonable accommodation education, a partnership with other state agencies for the National Disability Employment Awareness Month event in October, an awareness event for the department that will feature an organization that serves persons with disabilities, and an education presentation from the National Alliance on Mental Illness for CalHR. Emphasis will also be placed on encouraging employees to participate in an upcoming disability survey.

Age Demographics

The average age of a CalHR employee is 45 years old, while their average tenure in state service is 16 years. While this lengthy tenure can be an asset to the department, it also poses a risk since employees with such historical program knowledge can be difficult to replace. Currently, approximately 39 percent of the workforce are at retirement age (or are eligible to retire at age 50), and another 29 percent (77 employees) are within five years of the average retirement age. These averages are slightly lower than the statewide averages of 41 percent at retirement age and 27 percent within five years of the average retirement age but still pose a risk to our statewide programs.

Just 21 percent (60 employees) of CalHR's workforce is composed of Millennials, including many with just a few years of state service. CalHR has a much larger Baby Boomer and Generation X population which reinforces the need for significant knowledge transfer and professional development initiatives. In the next figure, (Figure 1. Generational Breakout by Division) a generational breakout is provided by division within CalHR. This information informs us of where we have a higher risk of knowledge loss due to impending retirements.

The following table (Table 3. CalHR's Workforce Demographics by Age and Pay) contains a snapshot of CalHR's workforce demographics by age and number of employees earning the maximum pay in their classification. The information is displayed at the occupational level. It includes the total number of employees, the number at maximum pay, the average age for workers in the occupation, the average age of retirement for similar state workers, the number of employees eligible to retire (50 or older), and the number of employees within five years of the average age of retirement. Of 289 employees, 123 (or 43 percent) are at maximum pay level, which could mean that employees may be looking for promotional opportunities or may be a risk for turnover if competitors can offer higher pay or other benefits.

Bench Strength Challenges

CalHR's Executive staff has identified a lack of bench strength as a workforce risk at several levels within the organization. Throughout the organization there are a number of program experts who are the only experts within their respective program. If they separate from CalHR, either temporarily or permanently, historic program knowledge will be lost without a knowledge management plan. Additionally, in many program areas there are a lot of new staff (hired within the last two years) that do not yet possess in-depth program knowledge.

Finally, a significant number of the leadership team at CalHR is fairly new to their roles. While many team members have leadership experience at other state departments, their knowledge of CalHR processes and business practices is still developing.

It is these challenges that have resulted in CalHR identifying a number of knowledge transfer opportunities and professional development initiatives that will help us support the ongoing development of the "CalHR Bench."

Recruitment and Retention Data Challenges

In preparing this workforce plan, it was discovered that CalHR lacks a mechanism to capture data on employee experiences as well as perceptions throughout the recruitment process, and employees' life cycle. As a result, one of the key initiatives outlined in this plan is the development of employee entrance and exit surveys so we can measure recruitment and retention program results and identify reasons for employment and separation. Vacancy data and turnover data was also analyzed and that information is included in the next section on workforce gap analysis. Finally, another initiative outlined in this plan is the development of a “stay interview” program: where we would develop an interview cycle where we identify reasons employees stay employed with CalHR, so we can better refine our professional development and retention strategies.

Workforce Gap Analysis

A gap analysis was performed to determine the gap between our workforce supply and demand. Results are intended to reveal gaps and surpluses in staffing levels and competencies needed to perform the department’s functions. CalHR conducted meetings with division/program area chiefs to help identify mission critical workforce gaps in competencies and staffing. This process took into consideration labor market trends, such as diversity expectations and challenges, as well as difficult to recruit classifications. Understanding the external factors which have a big impact on the mission and services of CalHR (e.g. legislative changes, collective bargaining activity, and governor term shifts) was also a critical component of exploring current and future workforce gaps. Executive staff feedback, in combination with CalHR’s comprehensive workforce data analysis, revealed department-wide gaps in the areas of recruitment, retention, knowledge transfer, and succession planning. Executive staff was encouraged to provide feedback on solutions they felt to be impactful in addressing these gaps.

Separation Rate – Trends and Forecast

Separation rates for years 2014 and 2015 were analyzed. Results show a total of 84 separations (29.4 percent of total employees) in 2014 and 62 separations (21.5 percent of total employees) in 2015. During this same period, approximately 30 percent of employees that were at the average age of retirement (59 yrs.) retired. For the other categories of separations, which included termination without fault, voluntary separations, and transfer to other departments, they have trended downwards although the average count of employees increased slightly. The voluntary separation rate from state service was 5.6 percent in 2014 and 4.2 percent in 2015. This rate excludes retirements and involuntary separations.

Based on recent trends, we estimate approximately 61 separations (21 percent) will occur in 2016.

Please see Appendix A: Separation Trend and Projection for data by separation category.

Workforce Gaps and Risks

Recruitment Gaps and Risks

Recruitment gaps resulting from current workforce challenges and trends include:

- Savings Plus Program often finds positions difficult to recruit for because they require personnel with financial investing knowledge. Financial investment competitors, especially private sector, can frequently offer more competitive salary and benefits.
- In Home Health Support Services Program and Labor Relations Division positions require experienced labor negotiation skills not often found in state government. Local government and union competitors can frequently offer comparable salary and benefits.
- The Legal Services and Information Technology Divisions also find recruitment efforts challenging, due to industry professionals being in high demand with numerous public and private competitors.
- The Selection Division experiences challenges with recruitment for some positions as well, due to a unique skill set required for testing, validation, and construction of civil service examinations.

The risk of not addressing these challenges is that CalHR may not be able to attract and retain qualified candidates, provide quality services to the state, or meet its vision to be the premier leader and trusted partner in innovative human resources management.

Retention Gaps and Risks

Retention gaps resulting from current workforce challenges and trends include:

- Cross-training has not been a focus for CalHR and as a result, knowledge has been lost when turnover occurs.
- Eligibility rule changes in recent years have made it more challenging to develop, transfer, or promote employees within the department who do not meet minimum qualifications of the new classification.
- Retention has also been a challenge for some divisions that were unable to “promote in place” or otherwise lacked promotional opportunities for employees. Some divisions describe a lack of a career path due to the use of a combination of general job classifications and department specific classifications that do not allow for movement between them.

The risk of not addressing these challenges is that CalHR may not be able to retain qualified candidates, provide quality services to the state, or meet its vision to be the premier leader and trusted partner in innovative human resources management.

Knowledge Transfer Gaps and Risks

Knowledge gaps resulting from current workforce challenges and trends include:

- Business policies and procedures are not documented in many divisions which have created knowledge transfer gaps as personnel separate.

- Professional development and training opportunities have not been widely available to CalHR in recent years due to budgetary restrictions, which has created voids in many employees' training history.
- A lack of documented key competency identification. Without identifying key competencies, it is challenging to create an effective professional development plan for employees.
- There a lack of knowledge transfer within divisions, but there is also a lack of knowledge transfer between divisions.
- New hires are on-boarded inconsistently, due to the lack of a formal on-boarding program.

The risk of not addressing these challenges is that CalHR may not be able to retain the knowledge and expertise needed to provide quality services to the state, or meet its vision to be the premier leader and trusted partner in innovative human resources management.

Succession Planning Gaps and Risks

Succession planning gaps resulting from current workforce challenges and trends include:

- A lack of documented succession planning programs, which include leadership competency identification.
- A lack of documented mentoring programs or professional development guidelines for management and employees to properly prepare for succession.

The risk of not addressing these challenges is that CalHR may not be able to retain the knowledge and expertise needed to provide quality services to the state, or meet its vision to be the premier leader and trusted partner in innovative human resources management.

One to Two Year Initiatives

Diversity and Inclusion

CalHR has a unique role and perspective within the state due to its direct impact on hundreds of departments and hundreds of thousands of state employees statewide. CalHR sees the importance of a diverse workforce and the advantages to the State of California if our workforce reflects the demographics of the people we serve. We embrace the view that all individuals possess a unique background and life experience, and their knowledge, skills, and abilities are reflective of that background. The more diverse our workforce is, the more well-rounded our team will be. As a result, we plan to develop and implement a diversity and inclusion program at CalHR designed to educate employees on the advantages of a diverse and inclusive workforce through a variety of strategies. An example of a potential strategy may include a managerial and supervisory toolkit that provides resources on diversity and inclusion initiatives in the workplace, such as targeted recruitment strategies and educational speaker series on issues of diversity and inclusion.

Recruitment

On-Boarding Data

With the collection of data from new CalHR employees, we will be able to better understand where successful candidates learned about CalHR's job opportunities, the demographic make-up of new hires, and what attracted these workers to CalHR. Similarly, by collecting data whenever an employee separates from CalHR, we will gain an understanding of what prompted the departure, so that we might improve retention strategies.

Targeted Recruitment

Due to CalHR's recruitment challenges for positions that require a specific expertise, targeted recruitment strategies for hard-to-recruit positions will be developed and implemented. These strategies may include developing new marketing materials, job advertisements, and alternate outreach strategies. Additional recruitment strategies may include developing a candidate "pipeline" by working with local colleges and universities to provide education and exposure to CalHR so that graduates will consider CalHR as an employer.

Employee Recognition

Recognition is important for any workplace that wishes to retain and develop high achieving and innovative employees. CalHR lacks a documented employee recognition program that would allow for peer-to-peer recognition as well as supervisory-to-staff recognition. Program development may include tools for "day-to-day" recognition, "informal recognition" and "formal recognition." Once tools are developed, a communication plan will be undertaken to educate CalHR employees.

Career Path Review

Retention has been a challenge for some divisions within CalHR that describe being unable to "promote in place" or otherwise offer promotional opportunities for employees. This problem is attributed to the usage of a combination of general job classifications and department specific classifications that do not allow for movement between them. To analyze this problem, CalHR will conduct a career path review within and across divisions to determine if changes are needed with classifications utilized. This review will be concurrent with the statewide class consolidation effort currently underway, to ensure career paths are consistent with the state classification plan. Once this review is complete, a communication plan will be developed to ensure all CalHR employees are educated.

Knowledge Transfer

Employee Training and Professional Development

Due to historical budget shortfalls, many CalHR employees have voids in their training and professional development history. During the annual performance appraisal process in 2016, supervisors are tasked with reviewing and documenting their staff's training history and discussing which training they should participate in over the next 12 months which align with performance objectives. Additional professional development opportunities will also be identified in order to emphasize a culture of learning at CalHR.

Policies and Procedures

There is a lack of documentation of business processes, policies, and procedures in many divisions which has resulted in knowledge transfer gaps as separations occur. CalHR is conducting a review of all its current department policies and updating as appropriate. In addition, the CalHR Administrative Manual is being reviewed and updated so all employees have a consistent understanding and resource for CalHR business processes related to hiring, contract administration and business services.

Knowledge Transfer Strategies

Cross-training within and outside the divisions has not historically been a focus for the organization and as a result vital knowledge has been lost when separations occur. In addition, documentation is lacking in most divisions for many business processes. Business process reengineering has been a focus for CalHR in the last two years, with approximately 18 projects concluded, but much work remains. This will continue to be a focus in the next one to two years.

On-boarding and New Employee Orientation

There currently is no documented on-boarding process or new employee orientation program at CalHR. As a result, new hires are on-boarded inconsistently, and workforce knowledge gaps can be attributed to a lack of orientation. CalHR will develop an on-boarding and new employee orientation program that will ensure these gaps are addressed.

Succession Planning

Like many departments across the state, CalHR has identified succession planning as a significant risk to the organization as many key personnel reach retirement age. In order to retain and cultivate the knowledge and expertise needed to continue to provide services to the state and meet its vision to be the premier leader and trusted partner in innovative human resource management, CalHR must develop a succession planning program.

Three to Five Year Initiatives

Retention

“Stay Interviews”

CalHR plans to explore a “stay interview” program or other engagement or climate survey program that would be aimed at capturing data on why employees choose to remain employed with CalHR or why they might be looking to leave for new opportunities. Additional retention strategies could be revised or developed based on the results of these surveys.

Job Rotation Program

CalHR has identified a need to explore and develop a job rotation program to provide employees with an opportunity to learn a new skill or competency outside of their immediate assigned duties. Some employees may wish to participate in a job rotation opportunity within CalHR or outside the department. This initiative would explore various models of job rotations in use within and outside state service, and ultimately develop and implement a program.

Competency Identification

In order to develop the training programs, knowledge transfer strategies, and succession planning efforts described in this workforce plan, it is important to identify competencies for positions within the organization. This is an ongoing task included in many projects. While CalHR has done some competency identification, not all competencies have been mapped to each of the approximate 300 positions at CalHR. Due to the detailed nature of this project and the need to access and update competencies as work changes, it is important to explore an automated solution to track competencies. Many automated solutions may also fulfill training and succession planning needs. The exploration of this solution will be done concurrently with exploration of an automated learning management system.

Mentoring

CalHR intends to leverage the resources provided for departments that are interested in developing an employee mentorship program. It is likely that mentoring will be one strategy utilized in the succession planning program outlined in the one to three year initiatives; however, a longer-term initiative will also allow for development of a more formal mentoring program with multi-directional recognition for staff at all levels and interests.

Action plan benchmarks are further outlined in Appendix B: Action Plan Benchmarks.

Conclusion

---

CalHR is a small and nimble organization with an important mission. It's an organization that is high-performing and strives to provide innovative solutions to its stakeholders. This Workforce Plan is a focused effort to retain this valued workforce, further develop the workforce and continue to attract high caliber employees in the future. Implementing strategies such as onboarding and succession planning will enrich opportunities for employees to reach their individual potential in a supportive environment. Employee stay surveys will allow a proactive response to retention, and allow us to do our due diligence in allocating resources to develop innovative ways for addressing employee engagement. We strive to lead as an exemplary department in illustrating that we value our greatest asset, our employees. We hope to extend this culture of appreciation and accountability to the rest of California's civil service employees through services provided and with a customer service orientation to the departments we support.
