Travel a metaphorical journey in a little red car, along with a mother and the daughter she hopes inspires through life's difficulties. As the daughter fits one hoop, maneuvers around corners, and scrambles up hills in the little red car, her mother is always there to encourage her about the importance of trying. Suddenly Mother is gone and the daughter must face a steep, jagged mountain alone. Through grief and despair, she remembers her mother's most important advice and finds a greater source of strength. The first in a series of short, inspirational stories from Nelladet and Illustrator Brian Hales Can't It Merely a Contraction for Can Try teaches the power of never giving up and the importance of having a stable, wise guide in our life. It is a lesson of courage, hope, love, and the victory of awe-life.

Together we can give back. Prof. Dr. Irena this book will be given to breast cancer research and The Dave L. Allen Arts & Illustration Memorial Scholarship Fund. Let's give and save the adventure together.
