

Allusion vs. Illusion

An allusion is a hint or reference to something or someone, while an illusion is a trick or false impression.

Examples:

The professor gave allusions to what she would include on the exam.

The magician's best illusion was pulling a rabbit out of a hat.

We named our dog Athena as an allusion to our love of Greek mythology.

The car salesman gave the illusion that the car was in great shape, even though it needed a new motor.

Allusion vs. Illusion

An allusion is a hint or reference to something or someone, while an illusion is a trick or false impression.

Examples:

The professor gave allusions to what she would include on the exam.

The magician's best illusion was pulling a rabbit out of a hat.

We named our dog Athena as an allusion to our love of Greek mythology.

The car salesman gave the illusion that the car was in great shape, even though it needed a new motor.

Allusion vs. Illusion

An allusion is a hint or reference to something or someone, while an illusion is a trick or false impression.

Examples:

The professor gave allusions to what she would include on the exam.

The magician's best illusion was pulling a rabbit out of a hat.

We named our dog Athena as an allusion to our love of Greek mythology.

The car salesman gave the illusion that the car was in great shape, even though it needed a new motor.

Like us on Facebook!

Brazosport College
Writing Center

Like us on Facebook!

Brazosport College
Writing Center

Like us on Facebook!

Brazosport College
Writing Center