

Creating a Working Bibliography

WHAT IS A WORKING BIBLIOGRAPHY?

It is a listing of possible sources (books, articles, web sites) that you might use for gathering information and writing your research assignment. A working bibliography will be a longer bibliography than the one in your final product.

The working bibliography will evolve and change as you gather new sources and eliminate those that are less useful. Some of the sources will be too technical; some may be too general; some may be inaccurate or out of date. These are areas where your critical judgment must come into play.

WHAT INFORMATION SHOULD I COPY FOR MY WORKING BIBLIOGRAPHY?

FOR BOOKS:

The author(s) or editor(s); The title; The place of publication; The publisher; The year of publication; The call number (if a library book – for your convenience – it will not appear in your final bibliography)

FOR ARTICLES FROM MAGAZINES :

The author; The title of the article; The title of the magazine; The volume and issue number; The date of the issue; The page numbers of the article

FOR INTERNET SITES:

The title of the web article; The name of the web site; The URL of the web site

FOR DATABASE ARTICLES:

The name of the database; See above for magazine articles
