About Chicago/Turabian Style

Chicago/Turabian style requires you to include publication information for each source you cite in two places: 1) footnotes/endnotes and 2) a bibliography.

1) Footnotes/Endnotes

The first reference to each source in the paper is accompanied by a numbered footnote that provides the reader with complete citation information for the source. Subsequent references to the same source are accompanied by a note with a shortened form of the first citation.

Some professors may ask you to use endnotes instead of footnotes. When using endnotes, do not include numbered footnotes at the bottom of the pages containing citations. Instead, include a page titled "Notes" immediately before the bibliography. Citations that appear in endnotes and footnotes both follow the same "note" format as opposed to the "bibliography" format used for citations appearing in the bibliography. When using an endnotes page instead of footnotes, you will still number the sources and list them in the order in which they are cited in your paper.

2) Bibliography

The bibliography appears at the end of the paper and lists all sources cited alphabetically by the authors' last names. Bibliography entries repeat citation information that is already provided in the notes but in a slightly different format.

The Chicago Manual of Style, 17th Ed., and A Manual for Writers of Research Papers, Theses, and Dissertations, 8th Ed., both cover Chicago style. The Chicago Manual is directed at an audience of professional writers while A Manual for Writers of Research Papers, Theses, and Dissertations is directed at student writers.

General Guidelines for Notes and Bibliography Entries

- Double space the entire document, including the bibliography.
- If no author is listed on a source, place the name of the organization or entity that authored the source in the "author" position of each citation (note and bibliography).
- If a source has two or three authors, list all authors' names in both the note and the bibliography entry. In the bibliography entry, only invert the first and last name for the first author listed. Subsequent names are written in first name-last name order (e.g., Smith, Laura, Bob Jones, and Frank Benavidez).
- If a book has four or more authors, list all the authors' names in the bibliography entry. In the note entry, only include the name of the first author followed by the Latin phrase "et al." (meaning "and others").
- Place a period at the end of each citation, even when the last element is a URL.
- The second time you cite a source, and each subsequent time after that, use the "shortened note" format for the footnote or endnote
