

Tina Lee
Reflection Paper 1

I really had lots of reflection on myself in this class. In the first class, we talked about “dream”. It makes me think about my future. What is the dream I want to pursue? I don’t really deeply think about that question because I always set a lot of obstacles before doing it. I remember we learned why we forget the potential success but focus on the difficulties that we haven’t faced. Why did I study in the university? What things I want to learn from the school? I think that these kinds of questions often neglected because I just thought it was a correct way to go before. And the similar topic we talked about was “What do you want to do before you die?” When I chose to study in English department, actually it wasn’t my first choice. I don’t put much passion in English study. My dream is to become a PD, Activities PR Personnel or director. I want to produce a program and film. However, I felt very confused about what I should do. If I now study in the English department, how can I improve myself to do things that I really want to pursue?

In the class, when everyone shared their stories, I found that everybody has their confusions and worries, but after listening and discussing with each other and teacher, I think I don’t need to be that afraid and had new ideas about my life. Life is so long that I can try, fail, and restart. In this class, I also learned different ideas, values and character from people of various departments. We can share our opinions or just chat even if we have different aspects of the questions. Through others eyes to the world, I can have different sights of the life we live.

Your realization is one of the goals of the class. Im glad you could find ways to cope with your own uncertainty. I hope to find that you pursued your dreams as well as find your own personal success.

94%