

Break a leg Idiom in Sentence Examples

- Before stepping onto the stage for his first solo performance, John heard his teacher whisper, "Break a leg!"
- Sarah, break a leg on your job interview tomorrow; I'm sure you'll nail it.
- "Break a leg, son," said the coach to Tim before the championship game started.
- "You're presenting your thesis today? Break a leg, I know you'll do amazing!"
- As the gymnast prepared for her final routine, her teammates shouted, "Break a leg, but not literally!"
- "If you're going to audition for that Broadway show, you better break a leg out there."
- "I have a big sales pitch today." "Well, break a leg, and show them what you're made of."
- "You're heading to your first international conference? Break a leg, I know you'll represent us well."
- As the curtains were about to open, the director came backstage and said, "Break a leg, everyone!"
- "Your startup is launching today? Break a leg, we're all rooting for you!"
- "Heard you're giving the graduation speech this year. Break a leg!"
- "The artist's gallery opens tonight. Break a leg, your work is incredible!"
- "You have your driver's test today? Break a leg, but stay safe."
- The author was a bundle of nerves before her book signing, but her husband assured her, "Break a leg, love."

- "You've prepared well for the marathon. Now go out there and break a leg!"
- "My sister has her first ballet recital tonight, and I told her to break a leg."
- "You're stepping in as a guest lecturer? Break a leg, the students will love you."
- The CEO encouraged the new recruit: "Break a leg on your first project; make us proud."
- "I know your band is nervous for the gig tonight, but you guys will break a leg."
- Before the TV anchor went live for the first time, her colleague said, "Break a leg, you'll be fantastic!"

Copyright @ Examples.com