

Hit the sack Idiom in Sentence Examples

- After a grueling 12-hour shift, all Sarah wanted to do was hit the sack.
- "You look exhausted, maybe it's time to hit the sack," Tom suggested to his roommate.
- We stayed up late watching movies, but eventually, we all decided to hit the sack.
- Even though the party was in full swing, Karen was so tired she had to hit the sack.
- "I have an early meeting tomorrow, so I'm going to hit the sack," announced Mark.
- The kids were so energetic all day, but they finally hit the sack at 9 PM.
- After the long hike, hitting the sack was the only thing on everyone's mind.
- The concert was great, but as soon as it was over, I was ready to hit the sack.
- "You can keep chatting, but I'm going to hit the sack," Emily told her friends.
- As soon as the final exam was over, Jennifer couldn't wait to hit the sack and catch up on sleep.
- The flight was delayed for three hours, and by the time we reached the hotel, all we wanted to do was hit the sack.

- John hit the sack early last night because he had a big presentation today.
- "It's past midnight; I think it's high time you hit the sack," said the mother to her teenage son.
- The camping trip was fun, but the comfort of hitting the sack at home was unmatched.
- "I'll read one more chapter and then hit the sack," Tim thought to himself.
- After binge-watching her favorite series till 2 AM, Lily knew she had to hit the sack.
- "I'm wiped out from all that swimming; it's time to hit the sack," said Alex.
- Rachel promised to hit the sack early to be fresh for her job interview the next morning.
- During the road trip, as the clock struck midnight, we all agreed it was time to hit the sack.
- "Don't stay up too late playing video games; remember to hit the sack," cautioned the father to his son.