100 Hyperbole Examples in Literature

- "I must have died and gone to heaven." L. M. Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables
- "I could be bounded in a nutshell and count myself a king of infinite space." William Shakespeare, Hamlet
- "I'm so hungry I could eat a horse." A common English idiom found in many narratives
- "Her voice was ever soft, gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman." William Shakespeare, King Lear
- "I've told you a million times not to exaggerate!" An often-quoted humorous statement in various literary contexts
- "The weight of the world is on my shoulders." A frequently used phrase, highlighting extreme responsibility
- "So we beat on, boats against the current, borne back ceaselessly into the past."
   F. Scott Fitzgerald, The Great Gatsby
- "It's a slow burg... I spent a couple of weeks there one day." Damon Runyon
- "I'm so tired my tired is tired." Frequently used in literature to depict extreme exhaustion
- "He's the funniest guy on the face of the earth!" A popular expression in many stories to describe someone exceptionally humorous
- "The skin hung loose about his bones, like an old lady's loose gown." George Orwell, Down and Out in Paris and London

- "His eyes were so deep that they seemed to stand back in his head." F.
   Scott Fitzgerald, This Side of Paradise
- "She's said so on several trillion occasions." Cassandra Clare, City of Fallen Angels
- "He's got tons of money!" A widespread hyperbole about wealth
- "I've been scarred and battered, my hopes the wind done scattered." Langston Hughes, The Negro Mother
- "He was as tall as a six-foot-three-inch tree." Douglas Adams, The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy
- "I will have such revenges on you both that all the world shall—I will do such things—what they are yet I know not; but they shall be the terrors of the earth." William Shakespeare, King Lear
- "It's been ages since we last met." A common hyperbole indicating a long time
- "Her brain is the size of a pea." Used in various works to describe someone perceived as not very smart
- "I felt so lonesome, all of a sudden. I almost wished I was dead." J.D. Salinger,
   The Catcher in the Rye
- "The world had changed to liquid silver." Ernest Hemingway, The Old Man and the Sea
- "I could sleep for a year." A common saying reflecting extreme fatigue
- "I've read that book a hundred times." Used in various novels to underline a character's attachment to a book
- "I was helpless. I did not know what in the world to do. I was quaking from head to foot, and could have hung my hat on my eyes, they stuck out so far." - Mark
   Twain, Old Times on the Mississippi

- "His laughter could fill oceans." A depiction of a hearty laugh found in multiple tales
- "She cried a river of tears." An emblematic hyperbole about deep sorrow
- "Every time I tell a lie, I hope it will be my last." Isaac Bashevis Singer, The Penitent
- "She was so dumb, she thought a quarterback was a refund." An example from comedic literature
- "He was so old that when he ordered a three-minute egg, they asked for the money up front." - George Burns, a comedic metaphor often alluded to in literature
- "A day was a year; a year was a day." Jean Rhys, Wide Sargasso Sea
- "Her beauty took my breath away." A quintessential hyperbolic expression describing someone's striking appearance
- "He was as skinny as a toothpick." A frequently used description in literature for a very thin character
- "It rained cats and dogs." A classic idiom often found in tales, indicating a heavy downpour
- "The trees danced in the wind." Used to bring nature to life in numerous poetic contexts
- "I nearly died laughing." A commonly used hyperbole about extreme amusement
- "I have told you a thousand times." An exaggeration to show irritation or emphasis in countless narratives
- "The car went faster than the speed of light." Used in science fiction works to denote extreme speed
- "His new book is light years better than his last one." A metaphorical use of "light years" for a large degree of improvement in many reviews and works

- "Your suitcase weighs a ton!" An exaggeration frequently used to describe a very heavy object
- "This bread is as hard as a rock." A descriptive hyperbole used in countless narratives to depict stale food
- "His smile was a mile wide." Often employed in literature to indicate a very broad, genuine smile.
- "She was buried under a mountain of work." A description many can relate to, used in various novels and stories about overwhelming responsibilities.
- "My grandmother is as old as the hills." A playful hyperbole emphasizing age.
- "It's a billion degrees outside!" Commonly used to describe an extremely hot day.
- "The suspense is killing me!" A well-known phrase indicating unbearable anticipation.
- "He had a heart of stone." Used across many tales to describe someone without compassion or emotion.
- "I haven't seen you in a century!" An endearing exaggeration about the passage of time since meeting someone.
- "The whole world was staring at me." A feeling often described in stories where a character feels self-conscious or embarrassed.
- "She's lighter than a feather." A description often used poetically to denote grace or a delicate nature.
- "His tales about his adventures are as tall as the Empire State Building." Indicating exaggerated stories or claims.
- "This book weighs a ton." Commonly used to describe a heavy or dense read, both literally and metaphorically.
- "His anger burned brighter than the sun." Used in literature to represent intense emotions.

- "I've eaten so much I'm about to burst!" A humorous hyperbole often cited after a large meal.
- "She ran faster than the wind." A poetic way to describe someone's swiftness or speed.
- "The news hit me like a ton of bricks." Describing the overwhelming impact of sudden news or realization.
- "This dress costs an arm and a leg." A saying often used to signify something very expensive.
- "I was so embarrassed, I wanted the ground to swallow me up." Expressing a wish to disappear from an embarrassing situation.
- "He is older than the pyramids." A humorous way to exaggerate someone's age.
- "The concert was so loud, it probably woke up the dead." To express the extreme volume or intensity of something.
- "The wait felt like eternity." Describing a feeling of impatience or prolonged duration.
- "Her eyes sparkled like a million diamonds." A romanticized way to describe someone's eyes that are bright or lively.
- "I was so spooked, my hair stood on end." Used in thriller narratives to denote extreme fear.
- "The ballerina danced as if she had wings." A poetic way to portray a graceful dancer.
- "He could hear her voice from a million miles away." Indicating the unforgettable or distinct quality of someone's voice.
- "She wore heels so high they touched the sky." Exaggerating the height of one's shoes for comedic or dramatic effect.

- "The man was so tall he could touch the clouds." A hyperbolic expression about someone's height.
- "My love for you is deeper than the ocean." A classic expression often used in poetry and love letters.
- "This pizza is the size of the moon!" Expressing the enormity of something, usually for humorous effect.
- "His boss is colder than ice." Used to describe a person with no emotions or warmth.
- "Her singing voice would make the angels cry." A compliment about a voice so beautiful it's otherworldly.
- "I've been stranded on this project for ages." Describing a prolonged and perhaps tedious task.
- "He was so lost in the book, he forgot the world around him." Signifying someone deeply engrossed in reading.
- "This place is as quiet as a graveyard at midnight." Illustrating extreme silence or a spooky ambiance.
- "I have a mountain of things to do before the day ends." Expressing being overwhelmed by tasks.
- "The water in the pool was as clear as crystal." Describing pristine clarity, often used in travel literature.
- "His explanation was as clear as mud." Ironically stating that something wasn't clear at all.
- "I'm so hungry I could eat a horse." A common saying to denote extreme hunger.
- "The sun blazed like a furnace." Highlighting an intensely hot day.
- "He's got tons of money." A casual way to say someone is very wealthy.

- "She floated through the room like a cloud." Describing someone moving with grace and elegance.
- "His voice was as smooth as silk." Used to describe someone with a very soft and pleasing voice.
- "The news spread like wildfire." A common phrase to denote rapidly circulating information or gossip.
- "I've told you a zillion times." Expressing frustration or emphasis on repetition.
- "The weight of the world is on my shoulders." Indicating immense pressure or responsibility.
- "She can light up a room with her smile." A poetic way to highlight someone's radiant smile.
- "His heart is as big as an ocean." Describing someone with immense kindness or generosity.
- "The chocolate cake was to die for." Signifying something extremely delicious or irresistible.
- "You're as light as a feather." A saying typically used to describe someone or something that weighs very little.
- "The car roared down the highway like a lion." Comparing the car's engine noise to a lion's roar for dramatic effect.
- "His anger erupted like a volcano." Highlighting the explosive nature of someone's anger.
- "I'm drowning in a sea of paperwork." Expressing the overwhelming amount of work or tasks at hand.
- "She sings with the voice of an angel." Bestowing high praise on someone's singing talent.

- "I was frozen in fear." Describing the inability to move or act due to intense fear.
- "The movie lasted an eternity." Used to express a movie that felt longer than it was, perhaps due to its pace or content.
- "Her laughter rang out, filling the entire hall." Highlighting the infectious or loud nature of someone's laughter.
- "The tree was as tall as a ten-story building." Exaggerating the height of a tree for dramatic effect.
- "His stories are as old as time." Describing tales that seem ancient or very well known.
- "I've walked a thousand miles just to see you." Emphasizing the lengths someone would go to for another person.
- "She was lost in a sea of faces." Describing a feeling of being overwhelmed in a large crowd.
- "He's as blind as a bat without his glasses." A humorous way to describe someone's poor vision without corrective lenses.

Copyright @ Examples.com