

Pull someone's leg

Idiom in Sentence

Examples

- "You really had me worried there for a second! Were you just pulling my leg?"
- "I can't believe you thought I won the lottery; I was just pulling your leg."
- "Sarah pulled her brother's leg by saying she'd eaten all the cookies, only to reveal a full jar moments later."
- "When he said he'd met the President, I had to ask twice if he was pulling my leg."
- "She pulled my leg so convincingly about the surprise party, I was completely shocked when it actually happened."
- "He's known for pulling people's legs at work; you can never tell when he's serious."
- "I thought she was pulling my leg when she said she was moving to Alaska, but she wasn't."
- "Are you pulling my leg, or did you really get promoted?"
- "I pulled her leg about failing the test, but she didn't find it funny at all."
- "I must be pulling your leg if I say I don't like pizza; who doesn't love pizza?"
- "Don't worry, the boss is just pulling your leg; the meeting isn't really at midnight."
- "She couldn't tell if he was pulling her leg or genuinely believed in alien encounters."

- "I was only pulling your leg about selling the car; I'd never get rid of it!"
- "John loves pulling his kids' legs with tales of treasure buried in the backyard."
- "You can't be serious about quitting your job to become a pirate, you must be pulling my leg!"
- "When he told me he'd seen a unicorn, I knew instantly he was pulling my leg."
- "My mom pulled my leg by telling me she'd thrown out my baseball cards; they were in the attic the whole time!"
- "I thought you were pulling my leg when you said it would snow in July, but you were actually serious."
- "You're not really getting married in Vegas, are you? You must be pulling my leg!"
- "Everyone thought she was pulling their leg when she announced her plans to backpack through Antarctica, but she really did it."