

100 Gerund Examples

Gerunds as Subjects

- Swimming is my favorite activity.
- Running keeps you fit.
- Cooking is a valuable skill.
- Reading improves your vocabulary.
- Writing can be therapeutic.
- Traveling broadens your horizons.
- Dancing is an excellent way to relax.
- Fishing requires patience.
- Painting is a creative outlet.
- Singing makes me happy.

Gerunds as Objects of Verbs

- I enjoy swimming in the ocean.
- She loves running in the mornings.
- We started cooking together last year.
- He avoided reading difficult books.
- They practiced writing every day.
- I can't imagine traveling without a plan.
- She dislikes dancing in public.
- He admitted fishing without a license.
- We continued painting until sunset.
- She missed singing with the choir.

Gerunds as Objects of Prepositions

- She is passionate about swimming.
- They talked about running a marathon.
- I'm not interested in cooking fancy meals.
- He is good at reading people.
- She is committed to writing her novel.
- He focuses on traveling sustainably.
- They are tired of dancing all night.
- He is guilty of fishing in restricted areas.
- We are excited about painting the mural.
- She apologized for singing off-key.
- The snake hissed menacingly.

Gerunds in Compound Sentences

- Swimming and running are great exercises.
- Cooking and baking are her favorite hobbies.
- Reading and writing go hand in hand.
- Traveling and exploring new places excite me.
- Dancing and singing bring people joy.

Gerunds as Predicate Nominatives

- My favorite pastime is swimming.
- His passion is running.
- Her dream is cooking in a Michelin-starred restaurant.
- What he loves most is reading mysteries.
- The hardest part is writing the first draft.

Gerunds in Complex Sentences

- Swimming in the ocean is relaxing for her.
- Running every day helps him stay fit.
- Cooking elaborate meals takes a lot of time.
- Reading challenging books can be rewarding.
- Writing essays improves your critical thinking.

Gerunds as Appositives

- Her hobby, swimming, keeps her in shape.
- His goal, running a marathon, inspires him.
- Their plan, cooking dinner together, sounds fun.
- My passion, reading, fills my free time.
- His activity, writing, has won him awards.

Gerunds in Infinitive Phrases

- To enjoy swimming, you must practice regularly.
- To take up running, invest in good shoes.
- To master cooking, follow recipes carefully.
- To appreciate reading, choose engaging books.
- To improve writing, seek constructive feedback.

Gerunds in Passive Constructions

- Swimming is being encouraged at the camp.
- Running is being promoted as a healthy habit.
- Cooking is being taught in schools.
- Reading is being emphasized in literacy programs.
- Writing is being celebrated in workshops.

Gerunds in Idiomatic Expressions

- It's worth swimming in the clear waters.
- There's no use running away from problems.
- He's looking forward to cooking dinner.
- They are accustomed to reading before bed.
- She's used to writing under pressure.

Gerunds in Negative Contexts

- She regrets not swimming in the competition.
- He avoided running late by leaving early.
- They don't enjoy cooking under stress.
- I can't stand reading boring novels.
- We stopped writing emails after the meeting.

Gerunds in Comparisons

- Swimming is more fun than jogging.
- Running is better for your knees than hiking.
- Cooking is less stressful than cleaning.
- Reading is as enjoyable as listening to audiobooks.
- Writing is harder than brainstorming ideas.

Gerunds in Descriptive Phrases

- The key to success is running regularly.
- The art of cooking takes time to perfect.
- The joy of reading is unmatched.
- The process of writing can be tedious.
- The thrill of traveling never fades.

Gerunds as Part of Phrasal Verbs

- He gave up swimming after the injury.
- She took up running as a new hobby.
- We keep on cooking every weekend.
- They ended up reading the entire series.
- He looks forward to writing his memoir.

Miscellaneous Gerund Phrases

- Swimming in cold water wakes you up.
- Running a business is challenging.
- Cooking for friends brings joy.
- Reading the news keeps you informed.
- Writing for a living requires discipline.

Gerunds in Real-Life Scenarios

- Swimming helps improve lung capacity.
- Running marathons demands endurance.
- Cooking healthy meals is rewarding.
- Reading research papers broadens your knowledge.
- Writing thank-you notes shows appreciation.

Gerunds in Everyday Contexts

- She enjoys swimming in the lake.
- They are considering running a marathon.
- He avoided cooking late at night.
- I can't imagine reading without glasses.
- We continued writing until the power went out.