Dear Ben,

I hope this letter finds you in great spirits and managing all your schoolwork without too much stress. I've been meaning to write to you ever since our project presentation last week on renewable energy. You brought some fantastic insights to the table, and working with you was both fun and enlightening!

Seeing how well we collaborated made me think about the upcoming finals. I'm planning to organize a study group and would love for you to join. I believe your knowledge and approach could really benefit the group, and it's always more enjoyable to tackle challenging material with friends. What do you think? We could meet a couple of times a week either at the library or a quiet café, go over our notes, and help each other out with the tough parts.

On another note, I watched you play at the school basketball game last Saturday—you really dominated the court! Your skills have seriously improved since last season. I've been trying to get better at basketball myself, so maybe you could share some tips or we could shoot some hoops together? It'd be great to learn from one of the best players I know.

Let's plan to catch up soon. Whether it's over coffee, a study session, or on the basketball court, I'm looking forward to hanging out. Drop me a text, and we can set up a time that works for both of us.

Looking forward to your reply. Keep up the great work, both in class and on the court!

Best,
